

Happy Holidays from C. Eule Dance!

2019 was a year of collaboration, creation, some fun performance opportunities, and an invitation to be co-presented in June 2020!

Early this year, I started brainstorming with Sid Samberg, an amazing composer and pianist, on a collaboration for a new piece. This all came into fruition in August when we were awarded a Homegrown Residency at UCLA by the Dance Resource Center, allowing us use of UCLA's dance studios for three weeks. This opportunity got the ball rolling, and we created, rehearsed and completed a new piece with dancers Stephanie Cheung, Lorenzo Edwards, Leah Hamel, and Eliza Tollett called "Zero Tolerance". The piece was inspired by the stories I was hearing of families being separated at the border due to President Trump's "Zero Tolerance" policy. Though the policy was ended in June 2018, there were no measures to reunite families and many families are still being separated.

We had the opportunity to premier the work at Sid Samberg's Graduation Recital at the Roy O. Disney Hall in September. We also performed the piece at ArtNight Pasadena in October (an evening of art and performance throughout Pasadena), and in November at the Dance/Back Annual Charity Fundraiser (an evening produced by Brockus/Red where we helped raise money for local charities), and at Music@Mimoda, where we also brought back an older work "Prelude" where I got to perform again, after a three-year hiatus, to live music by Sid.

Save the Date!

On June 12th and 13th 2020, Highways Performance Space (a theater in Santa Monica) has agreed to co-present C. Eule Dance. We will be performing two evenings of my choreography in collaboration with Sid Samberg who will be playing live, along with a work by composer Conan Skyrme, and other special guest musicians. The program will be a development of the works I choreographed in the last couple of years, plus some new works.

Any donations to help make this program possible are very much appreciated! To make a contribution, please visit our website:
